Paul Woolley

Syndesis

Paul Woolley joined LICC London Institute for Contemporary Christianity as Chief Executive in January 2021, having been Deputy Chief Executive at Bible Society. He was previously the founder and director of Theos, the UK's leading religion and society think tank. In addition to his background in theology, Paul has worked in parliament and in public affairs. He is a regular commentator in broadcast and print media, and has featured on the BBC and in Christianity Magazine, the Times, and the Sunday Express. Paul is married to Ruth, and they and their four children live in Wiltshire where they enjoy getting into the great outdoors. Follow him on Twitter at @PaulTWoolley

We are delighted that Syndesis are able to lead our worship again for our weekend at home. We look forward to being led in sung worship by Joel, Kaleb, Alex and Ben.

'Syndesis' means 'the state of being bound, linked, or connected together'. We look forward to worshipping the God who binds us all together in Him.
